Don't we think timplementation of these traffic laws can bring down the road accidents considerally. These laws are compulsory by dealing out challans in the lawbreakers, which will motivate them to internalize the law.

India is the second largest market for two-wheelers in the world. Being so close to leadership in terms of numbers and with two-wheelers being the preferred mode of transport for over a hundred million Indians, one would tend to think that enforcement of basic safety laws would be stringent. A helmet is the most basic, simple and yet effective safety levice that a two-wheeler rider can use to protect him or herself. The helmet only protects the head, but the need to protect that part of our anatomy hardly needs to be re-emphasized. The new rules enable state governments to designate any person /agency to car passengers. Unfortunately, there are many two-wheeler riders who choose to ride without a helmet. Statistics shows that helmet. Statistics shows that compliance, even in States where a compulsory helmet law exists, tends to be lower amongst women. There are innumerable stories of road fatalities, which could have been avoided if the riders we're with wearing helmets. The third key part of the helmets the cushoning. the two-wheeler is being taken out to the nearby place. The rate at which the number of two-wheelers in India is rising is 20 times the rate at which the human population is growing. In such a scenario, fatalities are only going to rise if things do not change fast. A study has found that individuals wearing a helmet individuals wearing a helmet without chinstrap suffered severe injuries in road accidents more than twice as quality sponge and woven cloth is used to create padding
